

SITUATION GRAVE FOR RUSS ARMS

LONDON REPORTS GERMANS IN POSSESSION OF STRATEGIC POINTS AND RAPIDLY PUSHING ON.

FIGHTING TO ESCAPE

Russian Armies Menaced by Teutonic Hordes on Every Quarter—On Way to Russia Proper.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, Aug. 6.—With the great Russian fortresses of Warsaw and Ivangorod captured by the Germans, the capital Baltic province imminent, the Austro-German onslaught has reached its height in the east and the next step will be the German emperor's triumphant entry into the Polish capital. That event is likely soon to be followed by the pronounced of a united and semi-autonomous Poland, embracing not only the territories wracked from the Russians but the Austrian crown land of Galicia.

Fight to Escape.

The Russian armies are fighting their way backward toward Eussia proper, inflicting blows on the invaders whenever possible and trying to fend them off the railroads running north and south in order that the German pincers may not meet and in the closing bring disaster to Russian arms.

The position of the army of Grand Duke Nicholas now is a matter of indifference as the occupation of Warsaw has achieved its purpose to greater purpose than that of protecting the retreating forces. The Patriotic reports show the Grand Duke has retired to the right bank of the Vistula, both at Warsaw and Ivangorod, destroying the bridges at both points and contesting the German advance across the river.

Russian Outlook Serious.

Back of the retiring Russians is the vast morass of central Poland, with few roads and primitive roads making virtually impossible a quick movement of guns and supplies, the back of Warsaw, the only fortress available as a rallying point for the Russians is Brest-Litovsk. Thus the Russians are menaced by General Von Beulow's column bending to the south and General Von Mackensen's army bending northward.

A German Prince.

The fall of Ivangorod proper forecasts the Russian retirement from the west of the city is officially reported today in bulletins both from Berlin and Vienna.

The occupation of Warsaw now is entering attraction on a series of important events that are being arranged.

First will be the selection of a German governor. Reports indicate the appointment will be a German prince, possibly one of the German emperors or an Austrian archduke, who will be vested with authority akin to that which Napoleon gave to his brother and to his marshals as kings of occupied territory.

Free Poland.

Berlin reports a council to be held on Sunday which will formulate a proclamation declaring Poland to be a semi-autonomous state under joint Polish and Austro-Hungarian rule. This conforms with the decision of a Polish congress which proposed joint Polish and Austro-Hungarian rule with a separate Polish army and the fullest Polish autonomy consistent with the strategic interests of Austria-Hungary.

The German offer of autonomy is regarded as a bid for the support of the population of Poland as against a similar declaration of Emperor Nicholas promising eventual Polish autonomy under Russian suzerainty. The outcome of these events in Warsaw probably will determine the political status of Poland during the war.

Is Speculation.

What the Germans will do next in a military way after attempting to complete their enveloping movement is matter of much speculation. If the campaign against the Russians is not energetically pushed, there is the possibility that the present victories before the end of the offensive in the east is continued, the Germans face the rigor and danger of a winter campaign in Russia.

Conservative students here think it will result in a compromise in which the Germans will withdraw part of their Austrian army leaving part of their men to maintain and secure the defensive positions which they have held themselves.

Berlin Quiet.

Berlin, via London, Aug. 6.—The British morning newspapers today publish no addition details, however, concerning the fight which preceded the fall of the Russian fortress of Warsaw and Ivangorod. Warsaw's fall has been discounted in advance and the news evoked no demonstrations in the capital. When the report of the capitulation of Ivangorod came, however, impudent processions were formed in the Unter den Linden. One considerable body marched before the palace of Crown Prince Frederick William and crowds were addressed by extemporaneous speakers.

The morning newspaper comment on the news was rejoicingly but on the whole soberly. The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"This unfortunately is not the end of the conflict, but it is a new promise that our cause marches on."

Announce Occupation.

Vienna, via London, Aug. 6.—The occupation of Ivangorod, 45 miles southeast of Warsaw yesterday, by Austro-German forces, is announced in an official telegram from the front.

The evacuation of Ivangorod apparently was admitted last night by Pergaud in an official statement, which said:

"In the Ivangorod district the Russians have crossed to the right bank of the Vistula, blowing up the bridges behind them."

A statement issued later in the night explained that the Ivangorod fort was not properly constructed for modern warfare.

This statement was made in reply to the American claims that a great victory was achieved in the Ivangorod capture. It further state all the provisions in the city were "methodically" removed after which the Russian rear guard blew up the concrete bases supporting the brick casemate's list.

Ivangorod is located at the confluence of the Vistula and the Wieprz river. It is situated on the railroad running to Lukow and Brest-Litovsk and also on the line connecting with Warsaw.

MUST LEAVE PLACE OR TAKE SENTENCE

Matt Bradley Pays Fine and Must Purchase Ticket or Go To Jail.—Reduce Charge of Ellis.

A few days ago Matt Bradley was arraigned in the municipal court for drunkenness and after paying a fine was instructed to leave town by the defendant to obey the order. This morning Bradley again came up in court on the charge of drunkenness and he plead guilty, and was fined twenty-five dollars and costs and the court affixed a ten-day jail sentence on Bradley. The jail term was suspended on the conditions that Bradley purchase a ticket and depart for South Dakota immediately. Otherwise he will go to jail.

After an investigation District Attorney Dunwiddie reduced the serious statutory charge against Ray Ellis this morning, and made the charge of larceny against him. Ellis was arraigned in court and denied guilty of the charge. Mrs. Thomas Adams, as charged. His case was adjourned until the 11th on the motion of his attorney, Gardner Kalvelage.

NEGRO LYNCHED FOR CRIMINAL ASSAULTS

Black Implicated in a Dozen Crimes With White Women, Taken From Officers By Masked Men and Hanged.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Shawnee, Okla., Aug. 6.—Ed Berry, a negro, charged with two cases of criminal assault, and suspected in connection with ten others that have occurred here in the last three years, was taken from officers early today and hanged to a telephone pole at the scene of one of his alleged crimes.

Berry was brought here from the penitentiary at McAlester serenely for trial. When the train arrived here and the deputy sheriff and his prisoner alighted, they were faced by a dozen masked men armed with pistols who appeared suddenly from the darkness. After an attempt at resistance, the officer was disarmed. A dozen automobiles loaded with masked men then appeared and the negro was quickly conveyed to Beard street bridge.

When the rope was put around Berry's neck, he was questioned about the crime and asked if he were guilty. In each instance he nodded his head in the affirmative. In every case the negro's victim was a white woman. Following the confession the negro was hanged in the presence of about seventy-five men, all masked. After the lynching the crowd dispersed.

RESIGNS AS WARDEN; REQUEST IS DENIED

Governor Dunne Refuses to Allow Warden Allen to Live Outside of Walls Where Wife Was Killed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Warden Edmund M. Allen of the Joliet penitentiary declared today he would resign because Governor Dunne has denied him the privilege of living outside the prison in which his wife was murdered.

"I had no idea Governor Dunne would turn down my request," said Warden Allen. "Any man who would ask that I live behind those prison walls and in the very rooms where my wife was brutally murdered, must be inhumane. But there must be something back of this. What it is I do not know. There are a few things I'd like to unload off my mind, though, and these will be embodied in a form of the statement issued to the public today.

Officer Rattle followed and as he approached Manning the latter stepped forward and pointed a pistol blank at the officer and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode and the second bandit pursued and shots exchanged, none of which took effect. It was a narrow escape for Rattle and showed the desperation of the two men. When confronted by Chapman this morning, Manning confessed to the killing of his wife.

Springfield, Aug. 6.—Gov. Dunne accepted the telegraphed resignation of Warden Allen of the Joliet penitentiary immediately on reading it.

"There is not a thing back of this but the law," said the governor. "The law provides that the warden live inside the prison walls. That is the proper place for a warden."

Search is being made for the second man by the Madison police, but he had not been apprehended up to noon.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON CONFERENCE REPORT ADOPTED AND LAWMAKERS TO QUIT WEEK FROM THURSDAY.

Philipp Places Signature on Numerous Statutes—Senate Has Afternoon Session.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Aug. 6.—Both houses this noon adopted the report of the joint committee on conference under which the legislature is obligated to complete its work a week from next Thursday and will probably adjourn sine die August 19th.

The session concurred in the amendment cutting the industrial commission $17,000 for the biennium, but non-concurred in the cut of $107,000 for the civil service commission.

Senate non-concurred in the bill giving state aid to rural school teachers, having already passed the Bennett bill covering the same ground.

The assembly voted concurrence in the Bray bill for state aid to consolidated school districts. Governor Philipp today signed a bill creating a state engineering department. The bill reorganizing the state printing board, readjusting the work of the state marshal's department, now creating a joint committee to effect the perfection of the drainage laws, the bill making an additional appropriation for the state athletic commission, the banking department appropriation bill and the bill providing for allowing dogs to run at large in country districts.

The senate voted to meet this afternoon.

CAR BANDIT TAKEN INTO CUSTODY BY MADISON OFFICER

Man Who Robbed Conductor Walter Martin Near Cemetery on Wednesday Night Captured.

With the arrest of Herbert Manning, aged twenty-one, in Madison last night, after a pistol duel with the Madison police, the finding of the watch lost by Walter Martin in the street car hold-up Wednesday evening, in his pocket, it is believed one of the mysterious highwaymen who held up the motorman on the local car line, has been captured, his companion making good his escape.

Details of the capture of Manning arranged were learned from Chief of police P. D. O'Neil, who went to Madison on a hurry-up call after learning from Madison that the man was in custody early this morning, over the telephone at noon. Manning was taken in custody by Officer Rattle of the Madison department as he and his companion were evidently preparing to rob one of the Madison street cars as it reached the end of the line.

It will be remembered that Martin was robbed Wednesday night by two men who boarded his car at the cemetery end of the line and after taking his watch and six or seven dollars, escaped across the fields. This watch, with Martin's initials and part of the money lost was found on Manning when arrested. Martin had retained the street car company for their loss of funds of the company, so that if the money recovered turned over to him, he will not be out anything but his experience.

It appears that after Chief Champion had notified all of the surrounding cities to be on the lookout for the bandits, the Madison chief placed

Time does not seem to have made any material difference in the playing of Hans Wagner, who is still holding down short field for the Pirates and doing it in a fashion that would be hard to improve upon. Not only is the Flying Dutchman fielding like a fiend, but he's hitting nearer his standard than he has for several years. Wagner was picked to have about finished his career this spring, but now he is playing as well as any man on the Pittsburgh team.

MORRIS MILLER

Business Manager John H. Dailey has resigned from the Pittsburgh club in order to enter the campaign for election as a councilman in Pittsburgh. As he stands close to ex-Mayor Magee, who has a large following, his chances for election are considered very good. The position pays $6,500 a year and the term is six years.

There's another proficient gum chewer on the National league staff of umpires: Cockrell is as expert as Orth. By way of variety, however, quite as much of a propensity, why not smoke a pipe or eat a pie of pie out there? As a public exhibition, it would be fitly an edifying.

Comiskey sent Outfielder Tommy Quinlan back to the Pacific coast league.

Reports of a big pool forming to bet against Brooklyn's winning the National league pennant are current in the New York financial district. The rumors are that some New York sporting men are to make a pool of $1,000 to wager against $3,000. It is also reported that a pool is willing to bet $2,000 to $1,000 that Brooklyn does not finish second and even money that it will not close the season in third place.

Sherwood Magee of the Browns has finally got to going and is now doing his share of hitting for the Boston team. Magee was a long while getting into the stride, and it was thought for a time that Comiskey had made a mistake in obtaining him, but he is showing now that the deal was a wise move, for he is the only one of the Braves' outfielders who is doing clean-up hitting.

Promoter Matt Hinkel, of Cleveland, admits that Alvie Miller, the Lorain marvel, who tackles Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane at Cedar Point on Labor day, isn't clever enough to be the champion. But Comiskey is too gullible to believe this.

"Miller is awkward enough to worry Johnny. Alvie has a style that, while not crude, is very awkward, and it's certain to worry Kilbane a whole lot. I've seen Miller come up from a prelin boy to a real topnotcher. His cleverness will not beat Kilbane. No, never. But his awkwardness and sticktoitiveness will give the champion a lot to think about."

Two swimmers who start in a 40-mile race to be held at Boston Aug. 21 will establish a new record for time in the water if they finish the event. The race is from Nantucket Beach to Race Point light. The swimmers will remain in the water for 24 hours. The men who are entered are Sam Richards, holder of the world's record, and Sandy Hook swimmer last year, and Henry F. Sullivan, who made two attempts to swim the English channel and who holds the record for time in the water.

Roger Bresnahan threatens to fire some of his players if the Cubs do not hit a winning stride again.

Clark Griffith, Washington manager, says he doesn't want any more scouts. His ivory hunters failed to find a single player in the minors who could be of use this season. Mike Kubo, who scouted for Griff for six years, has been allowed to go to another club. Griff says he will get his own information on minor leaguers.

CUBS MOVE UP BY BEATING BRAVES 4 TO 3

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 6.—Manager Bresnahan outgunned Manager Stallings on Thursday and Chicago nosed Boston out of the first game of the series, 4 to 3. With the score tied at the start of the ninth McLarry dropped a Texas leaguer into left for two bases.

WILL DIRECT BIG SHOOTING TOURNEY AT SAN FRANCISCO

Director Blasie and some of the medals he has won.

San Francisco is preparing to greet a regiment of marksmen who will participate in the great international shooting tournament in connection with the Panama-Pacific exposition, August 8 to September 26. The director of the International Shooting Tournament association, who will have charge of the event, is William F. Blasie, a famous marksman of California.

Archer advanced him to third on a sacrifice. Stallings instructed Tyler to pass Phelan, in hopes of retiring the side on a double play when Humphries came to bat. Instead Knisely went in bunt, and again the Boston manager ordered the batter passed, filling the bases. Sauer went to third and ran for McLarry, scoring the winning run on Murray's single, which shot past the drawn-in infield.

Boston played an uphill game and Tyler's homer in the ninth tied the count. Tyler ran for Whaling in the seventh and scored the second run on bunched in with Mike Vaughn's wildness, ending with a single in the third. Boston's first run Chicago fanned hits in the first and third innings for a total of three runs.

The yachts will anchor over night at Marion, Massachusetts and proceed thence to Cape Cod canal tomorrow.

Curious Fish in Wisconsin Waters

V. THE LAKE GENEVA CISCO.

Prepared for the Gazette by the Department of Zoology of the University of Wisconsin.

In Lake Geneva, perhaps the most famous smaller lake in Wisconsin, occurs a fish, related to the whitefishes and lake herring, and commonly known as the cisco. And about this fish there hangs a tale. Many a man in that region will declare that Lake Geneva is connected with Lake Michigan, though by an underground stream, through which the cisco travels back and forth, appearing in Geneva only in winter and spring, returning to Lake Michigan in early summer.

Now this is a typical piece of natural history as constructed by the uncritical layman, and it is but one of many such half stories of similar kind. Let us try to determine the facts on which it is based.

Careful examination has shown that the cisco, at most periods of the year, shuns the shore. Away from the shore it seems to occur at all depths at all times. The summer fisherman, however, stays near shore, and so ciscos do not come his way. There is an exception to this, however. At Lake Geneva, as in many other places, occurs a peculiar insect known variously as fly, scorpion fly, sculpion fly, or sculpion. At Geneva they call it the cisco fly. This insect deposits its eggs in the water where they sink to the bottom and develop into larvae. These larvae live at the bottom for several years until they are ready to transform into the adult winged insect. When this time arrives they start for the surface, usually in May or June, and never singly but by tens of thousands. The water must fairly swarm with them. No wonder the ciscos see them and congregate around them to feed. In following the swarm the cisco come to the surface and work themselves into a frenzy jumping at the adult flies as they break from the skins of the larvae. Here is the fishing situation. With "SKITCH" carrying a small hook, almost any small object simulating a cisco fly will do for bait. The more fisherman the better will the fish bite. In earlier years ciscos were literally taken by the wagon load in this manner.

But the cisco flies gone (the adult lives only a day or two), the cisco return again to deep water and do not again attract the fishermen until ice has formed the next winter.

When this is safe the fishermen go out over deep water, cut holes in the ice and start up business. The ciscos are attracted to the hole by crushing small fish and pouring the shiny mass of scales into the water. Soon the ciscos can be seen. Now a small hook baited with (you would never guess it) a small brass or pearl bead, is let down, and if all goes right the ciscos are hauled out as fast as the lines can be handled.

These are the facts. And just because the cisco is little seen, popular imagination had to construct a tunnel to Lake Michigan. And of course Lake Geneva had to be bottomless, too deep for any sounding line. Most of the ciscos are thirty feet deep bear that reputation.

But even robbed of this poetic lore,

"SKITCH" Takes the Curse Out of Wash-Day—"SKITCH" Saves All the Rubbing—"SKITCH" Banishes Washboards.

"SKITCH" is a wash-day miracle! You just use three teaspoons of SKITCH to a quartful of clothes and, glory be, you don't have to lift your hands again except to rinse and blue the clothes and hang them out.

SKITCH can't hurt the finest garment or spoil a delicate satin or silk patchwork. At Geneva they call it the cisco fly. This insect deposits its eggs in the water where they sink to the bottom and develop into larvae. These larvae live at the bottom for several years until they are ready to transform into the adult winged insect. When this time arrives they start for the surface, usually in May or June, and never singly but by tens of thou-

OLD LIBRARIAN WOULD HAVE BOOKS BACK FROM AUSTRIANS AFTER WAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Rome, Aug. 6.—Dr. Carlo Pratt, a well-known authority on old books and manuscripts, who has been Librarian at St. Mark's Library at Venice, at the Este at Modena and at the Palatine at Parma, writes to suggest that books which Austrian authorities and Princes have carried away from Italy during the days of their domination should be returned with the onerous conditions imposed when some of the books were returned to Italy in 1869 by the last Duke of Modena, Francis V., should be abrogated.

From the Este library of Modena, the late Archduke Francis Ferdinand, as heir of the Este family, took possession of the autographs of the poet Torquato Tasso and the "Offices" of Duke Alfonso. All those were kept back by the last Duke of Modena when he restored some of the treasures he had taken away with him when his kingdom came to an end. Others were carried away by

OPPOSES SPECIAL SESSION.
At the last cabinet meeting before the dispatch of Mr. Wilson's last note to Berlin the president discussed with unaccustomed frankness the plan he would be in if Germany refused to heed the representations of the United States and this led Secretary Garrison to advise the president in such an event to call congress in special session and lay the situation before it. Mr. Garrison urged that in a republic like this no one man, or small group of men, should undertake to decide such important questions without consulting the representatives of the people. Secretary Lane endorsed this view and added that it would be far wiser, from a political point of view, for the President to shift some of the responsibility from his own shoulders, as if congress acted he could not be blamed for any mistakes made. At the time the President said nothing in reply to this advice, but it is now learned that he is determinedly opposed to a special session. His opposition grows out of, not alone his entire confidence in himself, but his reluctance to have republican congressmen asking the highly embarrassing questions they are certain to ask. For instance, when congress does meet there is bound to be much severe criticism of the course of the administration with regard to Mexico. Then the democrats will be asked if their sudden conversion to the necessity of military preparedness is not due to a desire to obscure from the voters the woeful incompetence of the democrats in handling the nation's finances. They will be asked if the administration has not delayed intervention in Mexico until such time as it believed Mr. Wilson could profit by Lincoln's warning not to "swap horses in the middle of a stream." Of course, whenever congress does meet these questions will be asked, but Mr. Wilson would postpone the evil day as long as possible.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

"At one time in Rome, political offices were auctioned off in public to the highest bidder. In ancient Greece, theft was not considered so much of a disgrace as being caught at it," says Leslie.

"Our prisons are not ideal, but we have made progress in dealing with crime. There were formerly fourteen offenses in Delaware punishable by hanging. In the early history of Connecticut, lying, 'that foul and gross sin,' was punishable with five stripes at the whipping post and confinement in stocks; no man was allowed to use tobacco within ten miles of others; people were imprisoned in awful dungeons for debt. In Rome men were sold into slavery to pay debts; creditors could tear the body of the debtor to pieces, each receiving a piece according to the size of his credit."

"The demagogue rails against present conditions; he would have us believe the bottom has dropped out of humanity; he juggles with truth to stir up discontent. Today is the best day creation has ever seen. For two thousand years the Sermon on the Mount, like leaven, has been permeating the hearts of men. At last only that which is good can endure. The fires of life burn out the dross."

"There is 'one far off divine event, towards which all creation moves.' It is perfection—but it is not here."

FAIR PROSPECTS.

With the sun shining for a few hours today the prospects for a successful Fair week are brighter than they have been in some days. The management is doing all in its power to make it a success and the wonderful list of exhibits already arranged for, the huge entry list of the finest race horses promise excellent sport and the side attractions, all of the best calibre, demonstrate there will be plenty of amusement. Friday—Janesville day—it is hoped the business houses will close for the afternoon. Governor Phillip and L. C. Whittier, speaker of the assembly, are expected to be here, and the governor will give an address at the grounds in the afternoon. At noon he is to be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Grand hotel, his hosts being the business men of the city. Taking it all in all it promises to be a big fair and a big week for Janesville.

Once a famous general, instructing a class of youthful officers, showed them most clearly how they could invest and capture a fortification located in a certain position under certain conditions within a short period of time. He then asked one young officer what he would do if he commanded the fort in question to defend

it. He replied, "Surrender, with the honors of war." Asked why, he stated: "Why, then I could capture it again just as you have described?" This appears to be like the fighting in the trenches on the western front of the European struggle.

Apparently there is no doubt in the minds of the "Tax-eaters" that they have the perfect right to violate any party pledge that may have been made at the time of the last state election. What is a promise anyway when it comes to making political capital?

Once a Year.

Simon Mish (an extremely busy man) was enjoying his first bath that year. He splashed luxuriously, enjoying the unexpected sensation.

Suddenly the telephone bell rang. The telephone bell continued to ring.

"Mother!" swore Simon Mish, and got out of the tub and went and answered it.

"Hello," said a strange voice. "Does Selig Witshank live here?"

Simon Mish slammed down the receiver and went back to his bath. He was alone in the house. Five minutes later the phone bell rang again. Again Simon Mish left his tub to answer.

"Hello," said a second strange voice. "Is this the Micketootie residence?"

Simon Mish positively hurled down the receiver and went back to the tub. A minute later he was alone in the house. It rang again.

For the third time, Simon Mish deserted the tub and answered the telephone, and a third strange voice said, "Hello, may I speak to Rhudorf Wishwasher?"

That evening Simon Mish had the thing taken out of the house. No silly reader, not the telephone, the bath tub.

Our Liquor Bill. Take half the corn, add to it the cotton crop and the wheat crop in the United States and the total value is what is spent for liquor in the United States in one year. The yearly saloon bill is $2,500,000,000.

This much is drunk up, and of it no single item remains. The same amount spent in public buildings would make the country permanently beautiful; the same as in parks in cities or the improvement of schools. But when this much is spent in liquor, while the temporary effect is supposed to be the production of a physical exhilaration which passes for happiness the sum total is a larger measure of waste expressed in the slums. Lima Center Man Will Exhibit Beautiful Four Horse Team In Costly Harness.—Reedsburg

Horses Here.

So great is the number of exhibitors desiring space under the new grandstand and under other roofs at the big Janesville fair next week, that the fair board has already been forced to turn many away. The large amount of space underneath the grandstand has been rented, with practically no other room left on the grounds, unless these same exhibitors rent or purchase tents and rent a piece of ground to hold their exhibits. The weather being bad weather conditions of the past few weeks had discouraged the fair board to a great extent, and they hardly expected to be overcrowded with exhibits. This speaks well for the success of the coming fair, for never before has there been such an interest taken by exhibitors to show their wares as is being manifested this season, and principally noticeable this week.

Tents are being placed already in large numbers by two crews at the grounds, some of them being exhibitors' tents, with others serving as lunch and miscellaneous tents. Prize Clydesdale Team.

One of the best exhibitions in the horse department will be the famous four horse Clydesdale team, owned by James Van Etta of Lima Center. Mr. Van Etta will exhibit his team here during the entire fair, Janesville having the distinction of being the only fair city in the country, outside of Milwaukee, to exhibit this beautiful double team of pure bred Clydesdales. The team will be taken from Janesville to Milwaukee, to be exhibited at the Wisconsin state fair, when Mr. Van Etta will enter his prizes at the Panama Exposition at San Francisco. The fairs mentioned constitute the only three public places where the team will be displayed. The harness for the four horses cost fifteen hundred dollars. The public will be given a rare treat in witnessing this team.

Horse Arrangements.

Horses are arriving at the grounds constantly from the surrounding country. Because of the postponement of the races this week at the Reedsburg fair, the majority of the horses that should have raced there arrived here this morning. The half mile track is in good shape now and is being used by the horses at the grounds. Secretary Nowlan announces that barring any heavy rains, the mile course will be in condition by Sunday at the very latest.

Treasurer's Account Shows Only $1,941.25 Balance in School Fund—Total Balance of $131.79.

The report of City Treasurer George W. Muenchow for the month of July was filed with City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund, to be submitted to the council for acceptance. At the end of July there was a cash balance of $1,941.25 in the city coffers, and with the exception of the school fund, the funds were in good financial condition.

The report shows that there is but a balance of $1,941.25 in the school fund. The balances in the other important funds were as follows: General, $21,996.61; fire and water, $12,824.56; lighting, $7,746.20; library, $2,582.45; police, $6,016.10; first aid, $7,875.02; Second ward, $6,665.59; Third ward, $2,298.56; Fourth ward, $2,298.56; Fifth ward, $1,388.56; Dog license, $1,138.56; firemen's pension fund, $3,865.62.

ATTEMPTS TO PASS CHECKS SIGNED BY HIMSELF AND LANDS IN COUNTY JAIL

John J. Smith, of Pulman, Ill., was committed to the county jail yesterday afternoon for a period of thirty days under the commitment law, having sentenced from the Beloit municipal court on the charge of drunkenness. It was Smith's attempt to "monkey" with bank checks that landed him in jail, for he made several attempts to cash checks that were made out payable to the order of himself and signed by himself for the amount of $1,10. Smith did not get off scot-free, however, and the Beloit police found him in an intoxicated condition. A charge of plain drunkenness was made against him instead of attempted forgery because of his condition. New Lee of Beloit was committed here for ten days.

OUST "WATER WITCH" FOR "LONG GEORGE"

Fort Atkinson Engine Boiler to Be Placed at Monterey to Take the Place of Old Veteran.

Changes will be made in the fire department pumping engine that has been stationed at Monterey, a second hand boiler that has passed inspection by H. E. Pressinger of the state department, replacing the old boiler of the "Water Witch," which has seen better years of service in the Janesville department. A week ago the firemen obtained a pumping engine that had been in the service of the Fort Atkinson department for a period of five years. The boiler was taken from the pumping machinery and then subjected to the test of the state inspector. Being passed, Chief then decided to replace the old engine with the newer one, as the pumping machinery of the old Water Witch is in good condition. When completely repaired the new engine will be put back in No. 3 station for emergency use.

A brick floor is being laid at the west side station by the firemen, where plan flooring was formerly used.

EASY TO CRITICISE.

If it were as easy to construct as it is to criticise, Rome would have been built in half a day.

If it were as easy to do something worth while as it is to poke fun at something worth while, we shouldn't have to wait long for the millennium.

The girl who thinks it is clever to criticise was turning over the pages of a magazine, "Not a story here that isn't commonplace," she snapped.

An article on the girl in the office came in for her disdain next, "Never read anything so silly in my life. Such overstatements! No girl would dream of leaving fifteen minutes early every night, they certainly don't in our office" (as if that settled it for the rest of the world).

She Should See My Mail!

The column for young girls in need of advice she fairly sniffed at. "Imagine anyone actually writing in and telling such intimate things as these girls do. I don't doubt they make up the letters in the office" (she should see my mail).

In the housekeeping department she ridiculed the color scheme suggested for the living-room with all the cynical superiority of a girl who once studied art for one year.

On the fashion page she picked out one rather unattractive hat and held up the whole page to ridicule on the strength of that.

After she had sold the magazine down I picked it up, and oh, there was much good in it!

Mind you, I don't mean there was nothing to criticise and nothing to praise and appreciate. I am not foolish enough to say that you should criticise a thing unless you yourself are capable of doing better. As the criticized critic says, "One does not have to be able to lay an egg in order to be capable of detecting a bad one." Nevertheless, I think haphazard scornful criticism often arouses a feeling of antagonism in the listener, which makes him want to say, "Of course you are much wiser and better than these you criticize."

And Even Then They Probably Criticize.

Girls of a certain age sometimes get into the habit of saying sharp critical things about everything and everybody that they come into contact with. It is as if it gives them such a feeling of superiority, and it is such a relief to an feelings of timidity and shyness anyone may have. They do not realize how soporific it is not positively ill natured it all sounds until they meet someone else with the same habit, and perhaps even then they criticize instead of recognizing the fault.

I said "girl of a certain age," but the fault is far more common than that. We are all liable to it, any of us may drift into it if we do not watch and listen to ourselves.

Be ready to catch your self when you find criticisms coming too readily to your tongue, and having caught yourself, put that unruly member on parole and put the probation officer of your self restraint in charge of him to see that he does not repeat the offense.

Glimpses of Married Life

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

The night was warm and sultry. Olive lay across the bed with her head at the window sill gazing off over the moonlit pasture. The cows were lying down or slowly cropping the fragrant clover; everything was as distinctly visible as in daylight.

Suddenly she sat up and, unhooking the bedsheet, leaned far out of the window. A slight woman dressed in black was creeping along the edge of the pasture, her body bent to the height of the fence.

Olive sprang from the bed and slipping on her kimono and long dark coat, took her shoes in her hand and stole softly down the stairs. Unhooking the screen—the door stood open to cool of the hot house—she sat down in the shadow of a porch pillar and put on her shoes, watching meanwhile the figure in black, till it emerged from the pasture, quickly crossed the road and disappeared down a side street. Olive noiselessly let herself out of the gate and ran to the corner. She could see the woman walking down the street. By keeping in the shadow of the trees, Olive was able to follow on the opposite side of the street unobserved. The woman never turned to look behind her, and as it was late she met no one. The village was wrapped in absolute silence. As Olive hurried along, her dog rushed out to bark at her. She stood perfectly still behind a friendly tree, watching to see if the fleeing figure turned, while she called the dog and quieted him with friendly pats.

The woman was walking rapidly and this delay was putting a great distance between them. Still she watched, the woman turned a corner. Olive hurried on, not daring to run for fear of startling the dog to barking again. When she reached the corner the street was empty. Nothing stirred in its entire length.

"Mrs. Ash does not live on this street. I wonder where she is staying. That surely was Mrs. Elton," thought Olive.

She walked slowly back to the Mortons', taking deep breaths of the fragrant June air. Instead of entering the house she went on to the clump of syringas in the garden, and carefully examined the grass where she has sifted the plaster of paris. The moon was so high now that there was no shadow behind the bushes. There seemed at first to be no footprints.

"She saw the powder and avoided it," mused Olive. "I overdid the matter." On closer examination, however, a small footprint was discovered close to the bush, and a broken twig near the ground revealed a hiding place right behind the seat where she and the doctor had sat that evening.

"I heard a slight rustling. I felt her presence," mused Olive. "Why will the woman torture herself by coming here and listening to what can give her only pain?" The girl sat down on the bench and leaned her head back among the fragrant blossoms. The doctor laughed at her noiselessly.

"The object of any union is to maintain balance. If you think I am going to do nothing but be 150 per cent goodness and sweetness and light in order that you may slum up to me and be married to me."

"Did you think it was morning, little fellow?" Olive rose as she spoke. "Shut your eyes and take another nap. I'm going to, and she walked slowly to the house with bent head.

Heart and Home Problems

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl nineteen years old and have been going with a boy for three years who is one year my senior. Not long ago he quite made up his mind to marry me.

With another girl and I was going with another girl, and I was going with another girl. Now the boy with whom I was going with is going with my steady. As we are engaged to be married I believe in being true. But he is awfully jealous. As my sister and my best friend and I go to places of amusement we go together and it's natural that I talk to my sister's friend. This makes my friend jealous and he quarrels with me more and gets angry when I really do nothing to offend him. Now, Mrs. Thompson, what can I do to show him that I love him and don't mean any harm in talking to my sister's friend. I know he loves me because he is true to me. When I am with the girl that he went with he is very friendly to her, but I don't quarrel with him, because I know he means no harm.

(2) As my hair is very thick and long, what would be a good way to wear it?

(3) How late should a girl who works every day stay out at nights?

DOTTIE DIMPLES.

(1) A jealous man usually makes his wife very unhappy. If he will not overcome his foolish jealousy I think you ought to break your engagement.

(2) Wear it in braids around your head.

(3) She ought to sleep eight hours a night in order to be well and do her work with the greatest efficiency. Ten o'clock is late enough, except on special occasions. For a dance, theater party, or something like that, I think it would be all right to stay up as late as it is necessary. Any girl is foolish to overdo pleasure seeking by trying to have a good time every night.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Does one have to have a high school education to become a stenographer? I went to school and then was taken sick and couldn't finish my course. I am strong now and should like to take a business course.

A high school education is not required for entering a business college. I think you will be glad of your two years at high school, however.

RISE OF FOOD PRICES

BEGIN TO PINCH THE PURSES OF FRENCHMEN

[By ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Aug. 6.—Paris is beginning to feel the difficulties of dodging rising prices, particularly food prices. Everything was so cheap in the beginning and remained so for months, that it was possible for restaurants to make slight and gradual encroachments that were not noticeable to the public. One or two sous could be added to the price of a dish here and there in the restaurants without attracting much attention, although it added from 10 to 20 per cent. to the income of the establishment.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—And Angeline Meant So Well, Too.

AND THEN ALONG COMES ANGELINE

BY F. LEIPZIGER

The Ball of Fire

By George Randolph Chester
and Lillian Chester

Illustrated by C. D. Rhodes

(Copyright, 1914, by the Red Book Corporation)

This house was very quiet. Mrs. Sargent and Mrs. Davies were upstairs. The servants were all in the rear of the house, or below, or in the upper rooms, at their morning work. He entered swiftly and closed the door of the music room, then he whirled again towards her, with ferocity in his eyes. He came slowly, every movement of him alive with ponderous strength. He was a maniac. He was insane. He was frenzied by one mad thought which had swept out of his universe every other consideration, and the glut to kill was no more fearful than the purpose which possessed him now.

Gail, standing slight, fragile, her brown eyes staring, her brown hair disheveled about her white brow, felt every atom of strength leaving her, devoured in the overwhelming might of this monstrous creature. The sheet of music, which she had been holding all this time, dropped from her nerveless fingers and fluttered to the floor! That noise, slight as it was, served to arrest the progress of the man for just an instant. He was in no frame to reason, but some instinct urged him to speed. He crouched slightly, as a wild beast might. But the flutter of that sheet of music had done more for Gail than it had for him. It had loosed the paralysis which had held her, had broken the fascination of horror with which she had been spellbound. Just behind her was a low French window which led to a small side balcony. With one bound she burst this open, she did not know how, and leaped over the light balcony rail, and ran across the lawn to the rectory gate, up the steps and into the side door, and into the study, where Rev. Smith Boyd sat tolling over a sermon.

CHAPTER XXV.

Gail Breaks a Promise.

The Whitecap would have been under way except for the delay of the gay little Mrs. Babbitt and her admiring husband, who sent word that they could not arrive until after dinner, so the yacht, long and low and slender and glistening white, lay in the middle of the Hudson river, while her guests, bundled warmly against the crisp breeze, gathered in the forward shelter deck and watched the beginnings of the early sunset.

"I like Doctor Boyd in his yachting cap," commented Lucile, as that young man joined them, with a happy mother on his arm.

"It takes away that deadly clerical effect," laughed Arly. "His long coat makes him look like the captain, and he's ever so much more handsome."

"I don't mind being the topic of discussion so long as I'm present," commented Rev. Smith Boyd, glancing around the group as if in search of someone.

"It rather restricts the conversation," Mrs. Helen Davies observed, at the same time watching, with a smile, the tableau of her sister Grace and Jim Sargent. Gail and herself had taken Grace off shopping, and had forced on her sedate taste a neat and "fetching" yachting costume, from flowing veiled cap to white shoes, which had dropped about twenty years from her usual appearance, and had brought a renewed enthusiasm to the eyes of her husband.

The cherub-cheeked Marion Kenneth glanced wistfully over at the rail where Dick Rodley, lying with the sunset in splendor, stood chatting with easy Ted Teesdale and the stiff Gerald Fosland.

"Where's Gail?" demanded the cherub-cheeked one.

"It's time that young lady was up on deck," decided Arly, and rose.

"She's probably taking advantage of the opportunity to dress for dinner," surmised Mrs. Davies. "In fact, I think it's a good idea for all of us," but the sunset was too potent to leave her a few moments, and she sat still.

Where indeed was Gail? In her beautiful little curly maple bed, and digging two small fists into the maple-wooden coverlet. The parlor of the boudoir had not yet left her face, and there were circles around the brown eyes which gave them a wan pathos; there was a crease of pain and worry, too, in the white brow.

Gall had come to the greatest crisis in her life. So far she had told no one of what had occurred that morning. When she had rushed into the rector's study he had sprung up, and, seeing the fright in her face and that she was tottering and ready to fall, he had caught her in his strong arms, and she had clung trustfully to him, half-faint, until wild sobs had come to her relief. Even in her incoherence, however, even in her wild disorder of emotion, she realized that there was danger, not only to her but to everyone she loved, in the man from whom she had run away; and she could not tell the young rector any more than that she had been frightened. It was strange how instinctively she had headed for Rev. Smith Boyd's study; strange then, but not now. In that moment of flying straight to the protection of his arms, she knew something about herself, and about Rev. Smith Boyd, too. She knew why she had refused those others who had wooed her; Willis Cunningham and Houston Van Pico and Dick Rodley; poor Dick! and Allison and all the others. She frankly and complacently admitted to herself that she loved Rev. Smith Boyd, but she put that additional worry into the background. It could be fought out later. She would have been very happy about it if she had had time, although she could see no end to that situation but unhappiness.

Where could she turn for advice, or whom could she get to share in the burden which she felt must surely crush her. There was no one. It was a burden she must bear alone, unless she could devise some plan of effective action, and the sense of how far she had been responsible for this condition of affairs was one which oppressed her, and humbled her, and deepened the circles about her woe-smitten eyes.

Gail took her fists from their pressure into the brown coverlet, and held her temples between the finger tips of either hand; and the brown hair, springing into wayward ringlets from the salt breeze which blew in at the half-opened window, rippled down over her slender hands, as if to soothe and comfort them. She had been wasting her time in introspection and self-analysis when there was need for decisive action! Fortunately she had a respite until Monday morning. In the past few days of huge commercial movements which so vitally interested her, she had become acquainted with business methods, to a certain extent, and she knew that nothing could be done on Saturday afternoon or Sunday; therefore Uncle Jim was safe for two nights and a day. Then Allison would deny the connection of her Uncle Jim's road with the A.P., and the beginning of the destruction of the Sargent family would be thoroughly accomplished! She had been given a thorough grasp of how easily that could be done. What could she do in two nights and a day? It was past her ingenuity to conceive. She must help!

But from whom could she receive it? Ted Boyd? The same reason which made her think of him first made her swiftly place him last. Her Uncle Jim? Too hot-headed. Her Aunt Grace? Too inexperienced. Her Aunt Helen? Too conventional. Lucile, Ted, Dick? She laughed. Arly?

There was a knock at the door, and Arly herself appeared.

"Selish," chided Arly. "We're all wanting you."

"That's comforting," smiled Gail. "I have just been being all alone in the world, on the most absolutely deserted island of which you can conceive. Arly, sit down. I want to tell you something."

The black hair and the brown hair cuddled close together, while Gail, her tongue once loosened, poured out in a torrent all the pent-up misery which had been accumulating within her for the past tempestuous weeks; and Arly, her eyes glistening with the excitement of it all, kept her exclamations of surprise and fright and indignation and horror, and everything else, strictly to such low mono-syllables as would not impede the gushing narration.

"It will save everybody," declared Arly.

"I hope so," pondered Gail. "But we can't do it ourselves, Arly. Whom shall we get to help us?"

The smile on Arly's face was a positive illumination for a moment, and then she laughed.

"Gerald," she replied. "You don't know what a dear he is!" and she rang for a cabin boy.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Gerald Fosland Makes a Speech. Gerald Fosland, known to be so for mal that he had once dressed to an swear an emergency call from a friend at the hospital, because the message came in at six o'clock, surprised his guests by appearing before them, in the salon just before dinner, in his driving coat and with his motor cap in his hand.

"Sorry," he informed them, with a stiff bow, "but an errand of such importance that it cannot be delayed, causes Mrs. Fosland and myself to return to the city immediately for an hour or so. I am sincerely apologetic, and I trust that you will have a jolly dinner."

"Is Gail going with you?" inquired the alert Mrs. Helen Davies, observing Gail in the doorway adjusting her fur.

"She has to chaperon me, while Gerald is busy," Arly glibly explained. "You're it, Aunt Grace. You and Uncle Jim have to be hosts. Good-by!" and she sailed out to the deck, followed by the still troubled Gail, who managed to accomplish the laughing adieu for which Arly had set the precedent.

A swift ride in the launch, in the cool night air, to the landing; a brisk walk to the street; then Gerald, having seen the ladies safe under shelter even if it were but the roof of a night hawk taxi, stopped at the first saloon. There he phoned half a dozen messages. There were four eager young men waiting in the reception room of the Fosland house, when Gerald's party arrived, and three more followed upon the steps.

Gerald aided in divesting the ladies of their wraps, and slipped his own big top coat into the hands of William and saw to his tie and the set of his waistcoat and the smoothness of his hair, before he stalked into the reception parlor and bowed stiffly.

"Gentlemen," he observed, giving his mustache one last smoothing, "first of all, have you brought with you the written guarantees which I required from your respective chiefs, that, in whatsoever comes from the information I am about to give you, the names of your informants shall, under no circumstances, appear in print?"

One luckless young man, a fat checked one, with a pucker in the corner of his lips where his cigar should have been, was unable to produce the necessary document, and he was under a scrutiny too close to give him a chance to write it.

"Sorry," announced Gerald, with polite condescension. "As this is a very strict condition, I must ask you to leave the room while I address the remaining gentlemen."

Dinner Stories

"The car was going at least forty miles an hour," testified the constable. "It was all I could do to get out of the way."

"Your honor," objected the defendant, "that is a lie on the face of it."

If my car had been going as fast as he says, it was I'd have got him, no matter how quick he jumped."

"Hey you!" said the man in the automobile to a farmer by the roadside. "Is this the road to Patchogue?"

"Yes," said the farmer. "That's the road to Patchogue all right."

And then as the motorist threw in the clutch and sped on his way without pausing to thank his informant, the latter grinned and muttered to himself: "If he'd been a little more polite about it I might have told him he'd get there quicker if he turned his car around."

"Why is it, mamma," asked little daughter, "that my nose gets red only in the summer, and pap's is red all of the time?" "He doesn't go swimming in winter, does he?"

"I can't exactly say that he goes swimming," said the mother, "but he gets beyond his depth now and then."

Having gotten this off her mind, she resumed her sewing.

A bright little girl in a large school applied to her teacher for leave to be absent half a day on a visit that her mother had received on a telegram which stated that company was on the way.

"It's my father's half-sister and her three boys," said the pupil anxiously, "and mother doesn't see how she can do without me, because those boys always act so dreadfully."

"I think it's right to let her go," said the teacher, pointing, as she spoke, to the words "domestic affliction."

USED DYNAMITE TO DESTROY COTTAGES AT DELAVAN FIRE

Janesville Campers at Lake Aid In Fighting the Fire That Destroyed
Eleven Cottages.

Details of the destructive fire at Delavan Lake on Wednesday evening, in which three children met their death and eleven cottages were destroyed, which have arrived in Janesville all of the horror of the scene when the children fell back into the flames and the labors of the campers around the lake to save the remainder of the summer colony homes. Many Janesville campers were at the scene, and Linn Eller, Claude Drew, Mark Jones, Eugene Rich and Ranous Schaller sent the Gazette a vivid description of the night of terror which ended in the explosion of dynamite charged to check the flames from spreading further.

Reports from Racine, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Bryant, whose three children met death, show that Mrs. Bryant is almost insane with grief and fears are felt for her ultimate recovery. The Delavan Enterprise publishes the following account of the accident and fire:

In an effort to check the fire sticks of dynamite were placed under several of the cottages in the path of the flames, but succeeded in only partially wrecking the buildings, adding more fuel to the blaze. After the fire had swept the row of summer homes over a quarter of a mile along the lake shore twenty pounds of dynamite were placed in the fire place of Mrs. Ellen Fiedler's cottage, which completely demolished the building and was the means of checking the fire before reaching the M. A. Fiedler home which was erected this season.

The list of homes destroyed follows:

"Saphire" Highland cottage, J. Powers, 5800 Elmwood Ave., Chicago.
M. H. Gardner, Delavan, occupied by Paul Farbend and family, of Cut-chuck.

Haskins, R. C., 7350 Sheridan Road,
Chicago.
Mrs. Ellen Quigley, Rockford, Ill., two cottages.
Sage-Utley, Delavan.

C. D. Knowlton, Freeport.

The fire was discovered about ten o'clock and spread rapidly, driven by a strong wind and was not checked until half past one in the morning.

The supposition is that the fire had its origin from the fireplace in the cottage occupied by the Bryant family. After the children had retired Mr. and Mrs. Bryant attended a dancing party given at the Highland Hotel. When the fire was discovered Mr. Bryant and George D. Wellington, Jr., Chippewa lawyer, quickly at the Highland, were first on the scene.

The house was enveloped in flames and it was impossible to enter the burning building. The children were at the windows on the second floor. The father and Mr. Wellington called to them to jump, but they appeared dazed, fell back into the flames to be devoured by them. Willing hands were helping in their efforts to save the three children.

After the building had been burned to the ground Mr. Wellington began searching the ruins for the remains of the victims. He carried out the charred bodies of the children and they were placed in charge of Bowers & Lackey, undertakers.

That there were not more casualties was strange indeed. Within a few moments after the fire had been discovered neighbors and visitors vacated their homes and joined a bucket brigade formed to fight the fire. Water was carried up the beach from the lake and thrown on the adjoining cottage in an effort to save them from destruction.

There were two terrific explosions caused by the blowing up of the gasoline tanks in the Grassie and Miller cottages, causing tall chimneys to fall and timbers to fly in all directions. Fortunately no one was injured.

Volunteer efforts proved puny when matched against the blazing pine timbers in the cottage walls, however, and despite heroic efforts the flames jumped to the adjoining cottage and then to the third and fourth and fifth and sixth houses down the long row of beautiful summer homes.

The Delavan, Elkhorn and Lake Geneva volunteer fire departments were summoned and the fire fighters did some heroic work.

As the fire advanced the furnishings were removed from the cottages to a place of safety.

It was a gruesome sight to witness the removal of the bones of the skeletal, charred bodies from the smoldering embers of the destroyed cottage. It was pitiful in the extreme to see the bereft father, mother and sisters standing in each other's embrace in a dazed condition, peering into the ruins, apparently not fully realizing what had taken place—that their family had been reduced by three in so short a space of time. As they began to sense the truth the mother and daughter became hysterical and were led away by friends. After the night they were taken to the hospital in Racine in an automobile driven by Arthur Schumacher. The remains of the little victim will be shipped to Racine tomorrow for burial.

While engaged in assisting the bucket brigade in carrying water in an effort to save the M. C. Miller cottage, B. C. Christian was struck in the face with a heavy nail tossed from the second floor of the house. His upper lip was cut open and his two teeth were knocked out. He was cared for by Dr. B. J. Holmes, who was on the grounds.

Hundreds of members of the summer colony, including scores of women in evening frocks, turned out to fight the flames and worked until completely exhausted. A number of the young men never overcome by the smoke and heat in fighting the fire in the Grassie cottage. Among those needing medical attention were George Grassie, Harry DeClerc and Harry Conly. The young men had remained in the burning building too long and in one or two cases drastic measures were necessary to bring them out of their unconscious condition.

Efforts to check the fire sticks of dynamite were placed under several of the cottages in the path of the flames, but succeeded in only partially wrecking the buildings, adding more fuel to the blaze.

VENICE BECOMES CITY OF DARKNESS AND DONS SOMBRE WAR APPEARANCE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Rome, Aug. 6.—While life in the other great cities of Italy goes on much as usual during the war, without the usual summer air of festivity perhaps, and with a graver expression on the faces of the inhabitants, Venice, the Queen of the Adriatic, is transformed and the life of her people is entirely changed. The elegant bathers at the Lido are no more; the gondoliers wait sadly for passengers that do not come; the chatter and laughter of the gay luxurious cosmopolitan crowd at the Cafe Florian in the Plaza San Marco on the lovely summer evenings is no longer heard, for Venice, except when the moon shines, is plunged into darkness and all night lights of any kind in the houses or on the water are strictly forbidden.

Venice is determined that nothing shall be wanting on her part to frustrate the attacks of the enemy

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT.
 ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question: Now that the raspberries are through bearing what should be done to the vines?

Answer: The old canes which bore fruit this year should be cut out and burned at once. The burning is an important part of the care, because these vines are apt to harbor disease or insects which is left may infect the new growth. The new canes should be cut back to about three feet in height. If they had been pinched off as soon as these canes reached the height of two feet it would have been better. This causes them to branch thus affording greater fruiting possibilities. In the spring these branches should be cut from twelve to eighteen inches in the case of the black cap varieties. If one wishes to procure more vines of the black caps he may do so by letting the new canes grow until long and snaky like. Then bend over and cover the end with spade full of earth and a new plant will result. This may be done about the last of August or first of September when the tips reach the ground. A good method is to make a hole three or four inches deep and insert the tip. It will be well rooted in three weeks.

MADAME LE MODE IS AFTER RURAL DRESS

She has a Perfect Passion For Masquerading in Rural Raiment.—
Notes On Fashion
(By Margaret Mason.)

Dolly of the dairy
And Bridget who peals spuds
And Gretta of the garden
And Susie of the suds
Have all been emulated
By Fashion in her duds.

New York, Aug. 6.—Madame La Mode has a perfect passion this summer for masquerading in rural raiment, and adapting to her perverse taste all the quaint and primitiveatorial devices of the peasantry. In reddest manner she has shown that one touch of bohème makes all the peasant kin. In fact, this comic opera girdle of laced black velvet may be said to have struck a note of equality by being half way of a peeress and also half way of a peasant with equally pleasing results. Not being confined to the upper, lower or middle classes exclusively, it has come into the middle of all.

Many a last summer's frock has been freshened up to 1915 standards by simply adding the peasant girdle or bohème with its cord or ribbon.

Then there is the popular smock-like the gardener and Gretta, the gardener's girl, wear when they go weeding, sowing and spading; to say nothing of the wide brimmed floppy garden hat of loose woven straw that Missy has snatched from their simple heads to perch on her own frivolous papa.

Copying everything in the apron line from the gay little inconsequential attire adopted by the ladies' maid and the femme de chambre up to the more durable models displayed by the kitchen queen and presiding goddess of the laundry tubs she has converted them by grace of sheer fabrics and thread-like laces into exquisite finishing touches on her smart summer frocks.

The filmy fichu shrouding her snowy bosom was inspired by the sketching of the simple dairy maid and to such extremes is her penchant for all things primitive taking her that they have even affected her eating and sleeping. She insists on taking her food off the crude hand painted peasant wares of Brittany, Bulgaria or the Black Forest, while her bed and table linen is of unbleached peasant wares stunningly monogrammed. For after all, she prides herself as really getting next to nature and being truly artistic in her present peasant modes, and yet, though she wears an apron, it is even of the finest lace and hand embroidered. If she wears her dress with unbleached muslin and drapes her windows in cheesecloth and lays her table with coarse linen in natural shade, they are all exquisitely stitched and embroidered and monogrammed in the height of art and artistry. Dame Fashion only plays at being primitive.

Frock pockets aren't the only patch on the season's vagaries of apparel. Indeed, the whole scheme of a successful toilet seems to be patchy. Three and even four different materials and colors often go to make up a single frock, and the more the marlier is the mode. The tiny silk jackets of a plain color worn over a bodice of striped material whose sleeves and front are of a transparent white or erru chiffon with the striped skirt belted and banded with silk are the most prevalent phase of these versatile costumes. Some of them live up more closely to the patchwork idea by having a combination of dotted silk trimmed in striped organza with plain transparent chiffon sleeves, a blue silk jacket effect and a belt and garnishment of bows and embroidery seems a kinder term to designate some of these creations. To dub them simply a mess comes nearer to the verities.

It's been a neck and neck race all summer b'tween the stripes and the dots. Zebra girls will soon be turning dotty, however, as stripes are more dashing and noticeable, and therefore you tire of them more easily than of the more conservative little dot. Combining the stripes and the dots gives a result startlingly reminiscent of a "woman must" effect. To be sure this striking costume of note is a bold, but it strikes the right keynote of the moment and never is the least bit flat.

So don't do your stripes to don dots—just try a little of both.

If you have any articles which you wish to sell let the public know it through a classified ad.

ATTRACTIVE MARQUE ADDED TO FRONT OF MYERS HOUSE

An attractive marquee has been added to the front of the Myers Hotel within the last few days, and has attached much charm to the artistic appearance of the big hotel. It protrudes out over the walk, the top being made of glass and the sides steel. Beautiful drapings hang from the sides of the canopy, and the whole structure is brightly illuminated at night, giving it a very pleasing and attractive appearance. Not only does it add beauty to the hotel building, but it lends a charming aspect to the street. It is supported by huge chains, which lead up to the side of the building and are attached to each corner of the marquee.

BOYS AND GIRLS WILL HAVE EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Boys in agricultural work, and boys and girls having school gardens, are requested to bring their best products to the fair to be put on exhibition next week. Boys of the manual training department are also urged to make a good showing, as well as the high school girls who are asked to enter their articles from the home economics department, in this section at the fair. All of these exhibits should be in by Monday afternoon, if possible. They are to be brought to the places of exhibition located under the grandstand, where the educational superintendent or his representative will make the entry. There will be no fee charged for these exhibits.

WRANGLE IN SENATE ON JITNEY MEASURE
WHICH PASSES, 20-5

Bill Amended to Suit the Needs of the Jitney Owners Is Approved by Phillip—Reconvened
Tax Bill.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 6.—Passage of the jitney bill, amended to suit the jitney operators and approved by Governor Phillip, was secured in the senate yesterday afternoon by a vote of 20 to 5. The jitney men shall the result as a distinct victory, as it provides, in addition to making the bill $2,500 instead of $6,000, that jitneys must show there is a demand for their service, "regardless of any service now furnished." The presence of competing street railway service is considered this amendment to have bearing on the right of a jitney to operate over a given territory. The vote by which the bill was passed follows:

For the bill—Ackley, Albers, Bennett, Bossard, Burke, Culbertson, Cunningham, Everett, Fairchild, Hansen, Huber, Jennings, Kellogg, Perry, Potts, Rollmann, Skogmo, Staudenmayer, Stevens, Whitman—20.

Against—Arnold, Berwig, Bray, Monk and Muehler—5.

It is said Senator Arnold's motive in voting against the bill was the fact that jitneys are placed under railroad commission control, and he is opposed to such jurisdiction.

Called a Lie.

The only personalities heard during the discussion were sharp references by Senator Frank Hanson to J. H. Lehr, representative of the jitney operators. Senator Lehr is a former state senator, was referred to at various times as a liar, and other opprobrious epithets were applied. He accused Lehr of uncomplimentary comment concerning members. Lehr was credited with not desiring any regulation of jitneys, although admitting that the amendment was now just to the jitneys.

Of equal importance was the senate's action at the same session in reconsidering the vote by which the bill allowing banks to be taxed under the income tax law, and then in non-concurring with a private track bill, it ought to be given a free vote on the property. Arguments in favor of the measure were made by Henry Killilea, representing the Milwaukee road, and by Louis G. Bohmrich, representing the shipper.

Speaker Whittet said that the bill had preceded and that it would ultimately affect every city and village in the state. The measure was favored by Assemblyman Carl Hansen, Budlong and Cretney.

The vote on passage was as follows:

For the bill—Assemblymen Arnett, Beckwith, Biel, Bradley, Budlong, Caldwell, Cretney, Dickie, Donnelly, Edwards, Ellington, Everett, Falk, Feldhausen, Franzen, Gampier, Greif, Hager, Carl Hansen, F. S. Hansen, Killeen, Hart, Heim, Herzog, Johnson, Kell, Klem, Kuehner, Lohr, Neubauer, Lathrop, McGowan, Metcalfe, Neumeister, Nye, Ostlie, Reitz, Schindler, Schroeder, Smith, Spoor, Stewart, Tews, Weber, Wells and Woodward—44.

Against the bill—Assemblymen Berliner, Byse, Dixon, Engebretson, Fischbeck, Gruenwald, Hambrecht, John, Hunton, Hart, Helm, Herzog, Johnson, Kell, Klem, Kuehner, Lohr, Neubauer, Lathrop, McGowan, Metcalfe, Neumeister, Nye, Ostlie, Reitz, Schindler, Schroeder, Smith, Spoor, Stewart, Tews, Weber, Wells and Woodward—22.

Herzog Amendment.

Assemblyman Herzog attempted to kill the Burke bill creating a new county board of education of three commissioners he amended the county board. His amendment would also repeal the law of two years ago and restore the school laws as they were before the 1913 session of the legislature. His efforts failed and the assembly concurred in the Burke bill.

By a strong vote the assembly refused to return to the senate the Hamrecht bill to increase the non-resident tuition fee at the university to $48.

"The only reason the senate wants this bill again is to kill it," declared Assemblyman Bradley.

Concurrence was given to the bill appropriating the building appropriations of $255,000 for the state fair at Milwaukee over a term of five years. Of the amount $10,000 becomes available at once.

Report Budget Bill.

The finance committee reported the budget bill for the dairy and food department going to the governor's recommendation of a cut of $37,000 or better. The amendment provided for an additional cut of $1,000, it being practically the understanding that the vacations in the department will be reduced from one month to two weeks. On Monday this department asked for an appropriation of $72,000. On Tuesday an amendment to cut the appropriation was defeated. Then Dairy and Food Commissioner Weigle sent a letter to the legislature saying that owing to the increased efficiency of the department the reduction in the appropriation should be made and the finance committee then reduced it another $1,000. The bill in the amended form was passed by a vote of 61 to 14.

Assemblyman Bradley warned the legislature that unless there was a quorum here the remainder of the week there would be a call of the house. He said it was unfair for the Milwaukee members to rush back home on Friday and leave the others there without a working quorum.

Assemblyman Hedding promised that the Milwaukee delegation would remain on the job. Adjournment was taken in the assembly until 9 o'clock this morning.

Samuel Rogers gave a dinner and had the room decorated with candles placed high up in order to show off the pictures, says T. P.'s London Weekly. Assembly Favors Daily Session and Final Consideration of Bills on the 12th.—Assembly Affairs.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 6.—Following the adoption of the Carl Hanson resolution for daily sessions of the legislature, the assembly last night went on record in favor of the final adjournment of the legislature on August 19. Actual consideration of bills will be completed on August 12. Two years ago the annual consideration of bills came on July 29 and the final adjournment on August 9.

After four hours of hearings on the subject the assembly yesterday by a vote of 32 to 44 concurred in the Richards bill giving the railroad commission power to apportion a part of the cost of rebuilding side tracks to private industries, which have become a burden on the cities. While this bill is enacted to aid fifty industries, it will take six weeks to have it become effective. It is general application to all cities and towns in the men.

Argument Advanced.

At the hearing the principal argument against the bill was made by City Attorney Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee, who said that if the city helped to build up a private track it ought to be given a free deed to the property. Arguments in favor of the measure were made by Henry Killilea, representing the Milwaukee road, and by Louis G. Bohmrich, representing the shipper.

Speaker Whittet said that the bill had preceded and that it would ultimately affect every city and village in the state. The measure was favored by Assemblyman Carl Hansen, Budlong and Cretney.

The vote on passage was as follows:

For the bill—Assemblymen Arnett, Beckwith, Biel, Bradley, Budlong, Caldwell, Cretney, Dickie, Donnelly, Edwards, Ellington, Everett, Falk, Feldhausen, Franzen, Gampier, Greif, Hager, Carl Hansen, F. S. Hansen, Killeen, Hart, Helm, Herzog, Johnson, Kell, Klem, Kuehner, Lohr, Neubauer, Lathrop, McGowan, Metcalfe, Neumeister, Nye, Ostlie, Reitz, Schindler, Schroeder, Smith, Spoor, Stewart, Tews, Weber, Wells and Woodward—44.

Against the bill—Assemblymen Berliner, Byse, Dixon, Engebretson, Fischbeck, Gruenwald, Hambrecht, John, Hunton, Hart, Helm, Herzog, Johnson, Kell, Klem, Kuehner, Lohr, Neubauer, Lathrop, McGowan, Metcalfe, Neumeister, Nye, Ostlie, Reitz, Schindler, Schroeder, Smith, Spoor, Stewart, Tews, Weber, Wells and Woodward—22.

Herzog Amendment.

Assemblyman Herzog attempted to kill the Burke bill creating a new county board of education of three commissioners he amended the county board. His amendment would also repeal the law of two years ago and restore the school laws as they were before the 1913 session of the legislature.

Bills killed included: Ackley, prohibiting the depositing or accumulation of glass in public highways; Bennett, relating to highways and making the county the unit in the construction of permanent highways; Cunningham, relating to a system of permanent highways under county supervision; Bradley, declaring as public highways roads or paths considered highways through twenty years' adverse use.

Many Bills Killed.

The senate passed the Bossard bill requiring the maintenance of bridges across the waters forming the boundary between two or more counties to be borne at the joint expense of such counties and repair cost to be decided by the state highway commission. The senate also passed a bill appropriating $25,000 for two years to county agricultural representatives. The university appropriation bill were re-referred to the finance committee.

By a strong vote the assembly refused to return to the senate the Hamrecht bill to increase the non-resident tuition fee at the university to $48.

"The only reason the senate wants this bill again is to kill it," declared Assemblyman Bradley.

The Road to Unity

By REV. L. W. CUNNELL
Minister to the Deaf, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—With all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. —Ephesians 4:2, 3.

Much is said today of church unity. In some minds, apparently, the great need is to bring all the professing Christians into one organization.

Christ's words in John 17:23 are quoted frequently:

"That they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and that I have loved them, as thou hast loved me." But it may be pointed out that during the middle ages the ideal of outward unity was almost realized, yet the results which our Lord said would flow from real oneness were far from being attained. We conclude, therefore, that Christ spoke of a unity of another kind, and believe it is set forth in our text as "the unity of the Spirit."

Furthermore, this is a condition which does not have to be produced, but which we are to "keep."

Already, the truly regenerate are one in Christ, being baptized by the Spirit into the body of which our Lord is the head. But this oneness is to be realized in a community of feeling and purpose. This realization would certainly do away with some of the outward divisions among Christians, but the point of insistence is the inward unity.

Needful Graces.

Several graces are mentioned in the text which will greatly assist towards the goal of unity.

"Lowliness" comes first. This is a distinctively Christian grace, for while the pagans recognized it as right when necessary, they felt it was not good in itself. But our very exaltation in Christ is to beget in us the lowly spirit: the apostle has just been speaking of our high calling when he turns to exhort us to lowliness.

Drummond says that "toughness is conceit with a hair trigger." What a stepping-stone to unity, then, is lowliness.

Next comes "meekness". This is submission both to God and men, grounded in humility of spirit. Meekness does not press its claims yet is a most powerful grace. Founding an iceberg with mighty hammers leaves it undisturbed, but a warm current surely dissolves it; so the soft answer turns away wrath. What a lubricant for the wheels of church life is meekness!

But meekness is to be not only meek but "long-suffering." This is long-mindedness, as opposed to "short temper." It is akin to the unweariness of patience of God.

"Forbearing one another in love."

This is an active manifestation of long-suffering, allowing for the frailties and mistakes of others, even when they wound us. This can be done because we wish them well and love them. This grace enables us to take sides, even against ourselves, and we shall need it, even in dealing with Christians, for not all of these are perfect.

The Quaker and the Organ.

The value of this grace in the preservation of unity is exhibited in a quaint incident. Some years ago it was proposed to purchase an organ for a Friends' meeting house in a certain town in Ohio. This was strongly opposed by an aged Quaker, for the use of musical instruments was not so common among the Friends as it is today. In spite of his opposition, however, the organ was installed. The old man did not stay away from meeting, but the organ was evidently a great cross to him. Finally, the minister called upon him and the following conversation took place:

"Friend," said the minister, "thee seems grieved at the organ in the meeting."

"I cannot tell thee how grieved I am," was the reply.

"Well," continued the minister, "if thee feels that way about it, I will take the organ out of the meeting house with my own hands."

"No, no," demurred the old man, "if thee feels that way about it, let it stay."

And it did stay, while the unity of the Spirit was kept in the bond of peace.

Workers Under George Mueller.

The proper maintenance of unity is well illustrated in the work of George Mueller, founder of the orphanages at Bristol, England. Representatives of all the evangelical churches were found in his large force of teachers, yet a beautiful spirit of unity prevailed.

Mr. Mueller tells us that when he first saw certain truths he was disposed to stand aloof from those who saw them not. But this did not result in peace and joy, and he soon came to a better mind, for he recalled that only by God's grace was he given to see truth.

THE KINGDOM TORN ASUNDER.

(THE STORY).

Solomon left a splendid empire. His rule extended far beyond the boundary of Palestine and covered a population of 6,000,000 and a territory of 60,000 square miles. He also had alliances with Egypt and Tyre. His revenue was $20,000,000 per annum. The current proverb was that he made cedar as plentiful as sycamore, and gold and silver as stones. But the upholder of the empire was also the overthower of it. His own hand sowed the seed of dissolution. He disregarded that natural and persistent jealousy between Judah and Ephraim which David had bridged by his statesmanship. He taxed the northern tribes excessively and lavished the revenue on Jerusalem, forgetting entirely time-honored Shechem. All the tokens of greatest national calamity were apparent before Solomon died, yet he seems to have taken no steps to avert that calamity. His life, too, gave the lie to all his well-tumed ethical phrases and all the exemplary power incident to high office was lost. * * A crisis hour in the history of the Hebrew Commonwealth had surely come when Solomon died. Tribal jealousies, popular discontent, threatened invasion, created a state of affairs calling loudly for a man of ability, courage and patriotism. It is said that Solomon had a thousand wives, but one, and he a concubine fool. Solo met the grave situation there came shambling out of the luxurious environment of the harem the shallow, effeminate, pitiful son of Rehoboam. There was a great outcry in his name, which signified anger of the people. It is an added stigma on the character of Solomon that he did not train his son for statecraft, or if he had been incapable, did not find another to reign in his stead. * * Rehoboam went up to Shechem to meet a body resembling in its composition and powers the States-General of France, before which he gave three points in common. The Hebrew National Assembly was resolved that the new king should plait his faith as a constitutional monarch. Had he consented, rebellion would have been nipped in the bud. There was a three days' truce. It was the pause before a great catastrophe, which is always solemn. During this time Rehoboam was taking counsel chiefly of his fellows, the gilded youths of the empire. Then came the king's ranklesome insolent answer to his subjects, the very edge of revolt, in which he threatened to add to his father's yoke and exchange his whips for scorpions. The war cry arose at once, "To your tents, O Israel" which has been aptly called "Solomon's Marseillaise." Even David's sacred name had lost its spell as the people cried, "See, here is our house, David!" With the inveteracy of a prince of blunderers Rehoboam sent a tax-gatherer to collect tax-resisters. At sight of "Adoram, who was over the tribute" the first overt act was committed and the first blood of the revolution shed. Hapless Adoram proved the only blood. * * Hebrew society parted into two streams that day, neither to be reunited. Ten tribes, carrying with them two-thirds of the population of the territory, flowed off into the channel of the kingdom of Israel, to continue for three centuries until swallowed up in the Assyrian captivity. The tribes of Judah and the half tribe of Benjamin, and later the tribe of Levi formed the other stream of Hebrew life, flowing on for four hundred years until engulfed in the Babylonian captivity.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

A new literature is opened to us. The Books of Kings and Chronicles. They are of great antiquity, dating back in round numbers 2,500 years.

They are made up of documents still older—trial records and state records.

Their divisions are arbitrary and unhappy. For example, the Books of Kings were originally undivided, and had one compiler. The same is true of the Books of Chronicles, in which Ezra and Nehemiah were included.

The Hebrew name of the compilation is almost equivalent to our word diary. Some think the writer to have been Ezra. * * These two books are in point of fact two books. They have a noble purpose. They are written for the examples about to be restored to Jerusalem. They are intended to quicken the national spirit, to outline the principles of civic righteousness, which are also the principles of peace and prosperity.

* * It is worthy of notice in passing that Chronicles names more persons of material than any other book in the Bible. For example, it cites Samuel and Kings, and other documents not in the chronicles of the Kings, last words of David, monographs by Nathan, Samuel, Gad, Abiathar, Iddo, Jehu, and Isaiyah. Shechem was a "city of refuge." But it certainly did not prove such to Rehoboam. * * The historical associations of the city were important and sacred. The names of Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, and Joshua were linked to it. On the dull background of Rehoboam's inanity, Rehoboam's forceful character stands in lively contrast. * * Rehoboam counts for much. Rehoboam's mother was an idolatrous princess and his father a sensualist. * * The vacillating incompetence of Rehoboam is strikingly illustrated by the readiness with which he substitutes the office of mediator for his insolent ultimatum. * * There are certain idiomatic phrases, the meaning of which must be sought. For example, "What portion have we in David?" The reference is to the dynasty as represented in Rehoboam. The language is in striking contrast to the saying, "We have ten parts in the King" (2 Sam. 19, 43). "To your tents!" The reference is to the wilderness life when the tribes camped in fixed relation to each other. It finds its modern analogy in the military term assembly, "call to the colors." * * The points of analogy and contrast between the two kingdoms now formed may be followed with advantage. Israel survived three centuries, had twice the territory and population of Judah. Most of the historic sites, and most of the prophets. It ended in the Assyrian captivity. Judah had the temple, the priesthood, and Israhel among the prophets. It was interrupted by the Babylonian captivity, but survived until A. D. 70.

HOW CAN WE PROMOTE THE TRANSCONTINENTAL REFORM?

The prayer of Saint Paul for his Persian converts is a universal and perpetual petition. It includes all men and all good causes to the end of time. It is to the effect that all Jesus stood for in the way of love, service and sacrifice may be enshrined in every human heart. The first result will be stability. One will be rooted in the soil, the next in the vision. One will appear and bring the immaterial dimensions of divine love. Never in the history of the world was there more need of praying this prayer. Never was this prayer apparently on the point of answer, as seen in the sweeping and phenomenal success of one great and humane reform.

CONDUCT OF JAPAN TOWARD CHINESE IS SUBJECT OF COUNT

Count Okuma Gives Interview On the Relations Between the Two Great Races of the East.
[By ASSOCIATED PRESS]

San Francisco, Aug. 6.—The conduct of Japan toward China is explained especially for American understanding by Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier, in a message which has been given to Dr. Clark MacCauley, an American clergyman and author who for many years has been a resident of Tokyo and an active leader in the American and Japanese peace societies.

Count Okuma is said to desire greatly that the American understanding of Japanese relations with China be clarified in some particulars, and Dr. MacCauley, who has had close personal acquaintance with the premier, undertook to gratify the latter's wish by reporting a summary of half-an-hour's interview, which he had with Count Okuma through an interpreter. This summary is described by Dr. MacCauley as a faithful one, but not an effort to reproduce the Count's remarks.

Growth of Japan.
"The rise of Japan," the Premier began, "has aroused some concern and aroused some interest in the West. In the histories of nations we see that often, with the increase of growth of a new nationality, violent aggressions, accompanied by various barbarities and sometimes atrocities, have marked their advance. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the rise and expansion of Japan have drawn to them a suspicious attention in the West, especially since the passing of the Chinese war twenty years ago. And now a world attention is being given to the conduct of the diplomatic relations that have arisen between these two countries. But the intelligent classes of Americans may easily understand the peculiar position in which Japan has been placed by the movement of events in the Far East."

"The United States has gained its present greatness and power as the result of a long process of annexations of territory by the purchase and conquest. You know that the enormous Louisiana territory was bought by your country, and that Texas and California came to you through Mexico directly. Mexico has lost great wealth. Yet, indirectly, Mexico has been benefited immeasurably by the conduct of her strong and faithful neighbor—the United States. If, for example, your country had been indifferent or passive fifty years ago to what then occurred in Mexico, that country would have come under a rule of the French dynasty and the greed of the ambitious Louis Napoleon would have gratified. Mexico should be grateful for the friendship and the helpful protection of the United States as given to her at that time. Condition Explained.

"Now, it is not going too far to say that a very good parallel can be drawn between the relation at present existing between Japan and China and that existing the conduct of the United States towards Mexico in the past—the only noticeable difference being in the relative magnitudes and resources of the nationalities of the Far East. China has been supported either directly or indirectly by Japan for a long time. Had this not been the case, the ancient Chinese Empire would now be the newest Republic and would have collapsed or partitioned long before this.

"Japan has never attempted or wished to do away with the sovereign integrity and national independence of China. Even the China-Japan war of 1894-5 was fought, above all else, for the sake of self-preservation of the Japanese nationality.

"The course of the recent international affairs between Japan and China seems to have occasioned some severe criticism in parts of the West, but the diplomatic motives and the conduct of the discussions have been right and very just.

It was evident to Japan that the war in Tsin-tau was a serious menace and peril to the peace of the Far East. With the co-operation of the British army and navy, the Japanese forces brought about a surrender of the Kiao-Chow fortress.

But it is equally evident to Japan that the occupation of Tsin-tau is useless and undesirable. Because of this fact, even if there were no other reason, the Japanese government will return the Kiao-Chow territory to China.

GERMAN TO BANISH LATIN SCRIPT FROM THEIR OWN LANGUAGE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Along with the movement to purify the German language of foreign words comes another designed to banish the Latin script from the country. An advocate of this writes:

"One of the resources of our enemies is the English language, through which a great part of the world, including North America, is dominated. Along with Britain's language, there goes English characteristics and English ways of thinking. Hence the German truth cannot go through the English language-filter. Hence we should no longer use the English script in Germany. Whoever uses the Latin script of our schools uses in reality English script. This script has also been used in France under the name of 'écriture française.' Since we are so enthusiastic about foreign things, we have taken the English script as our own, with a respectful obsequia, and are on the best road to deny utterly the script of a Goethe, a Koerner, a Jahn and other real Germans."

GETTING FIRST GRADE CREAM

Dairy Commissioner of Kansas Offers Suggestions to Dairymen—Cleanliness Is First.

In his grading circular, State Dairy Commissioner Hine of Kansas offers suggestions as to how first grade cream can be produced. The principal thought is that of cleanliness in every detail, and the following are the principal rules:

Remove all milk from the barn immediately after milking and separate at once.

Set the separator screw so that the cream will test about thirty-five percent butterfat.

Wash, scald and air the separator and all other milk utensils immediately after using.

Cool the cream immediately after separating it. Never mix warm cream with cold cream.

Keep the milk and cream cool. This is best done by placing the cans containing it in a tank of flowing water.

Stir all cream at least twice a day.

Do not allow the cream to freeze.

Keep the receptacles containing milk and cream covered with a wet blanket while delivering these products during warm weather.

He suggests also that every patron ascertain from the cream buyer the grade of the cream delivered, so that the patron will labor under no misapprehension and may be able to exercise such precaution as may be necessary to improve the grade.

He says: "Do not blame the buyer if your cream does not grade first. Find out and remedy the evil. Everyone can produce first grade cream."

It is an interesting and instructive fact in regard to the Ayrshire cow that as new herds and new cows are entered for the advanced registry testing they seem to uniformly come up to the high standard of production, showing that the great majority of the breed are most superior dairy cows.

The imported cows and the home-bred cows, the cows of the East and the cows of the West, the cows of the North and the cows of the South, all show that they belong to the same high class of dairy cows.

The records show that as dairy cows no one man or no one herd has all the great dairy cows.

When we think we have struck a wonderful dairy family, behold some breeder who has never given his cows an official test starts in and shows that he, too, has wonderful producers that stand on a par with the noted Ayrshires.

It is interesting to notice that with the increase in number being tested, there is also a steady increasing total average in all the classes.

DAIRY NOTES

Don't put a dairy cow on starvation diet.

Diversified farming should include dairying as the most important factor.

When cows are stabled to stand face to face, they become restless and nervous.

When a cow produces a half ton of butter per year, as some do, she has a right to be called a factory.

The manger should be low, since the cow gets upon her hind feet first, and a high manger also makes it tiring for her to get her food.

How the cows do draw up the water during hot days! A tablet to a thirsty cow is as a single chocolate sundae to a thirsty school girl.

See that plenty of clean water is provided the dairy cows. A dairy cow drinks about four pounds of water for each pound of dry food eaten.

The best cow is always the cheapest. A $70 cow costs little more to feed than a $40 cow and is likely to give much more and better milk.

Overripe cream makes rancid butter. It may taste all right when taken from the churn, but in a few hours becomes the same old sour cream.

The "Stocking Bank." The banking of small change in stockings is strictly original with women. Men's socks extend only a trifle above the ankle and usually have holes in the heels, which make them rather unsafe depositories, while a lady's stocking has its entrance at the knee cap, hence it would be a difficult matter to draw upon her bank unless the draft were duly certified by the lady herself. —"Zim" in Cartoons Magazine.

Because of the variety of uses to which it is put in its different forms, there is no uniform system of measuring stone. Square feet, yards and rods, perches, cords and tons are all included in the list.

It is an interesting and instructive fact in regard to the Ayrshire cow that as new herds and new cows are entered for the advanced registry testing they seem to uniformly come

Uninterrupted Mind Energy Promotes Perfect Health

Your brain generates MIND ENERGY. This mind energy flows from your brain in currents out through your NERVES to all the various organs and parts of your body, giving to each and all their life and power to function.

Perfect currents to all parts mean perfect health. Imperfect currents to any part mean imperfect health, weakness and disease of that part.

In order that these currents may be perfect—normal in volumes—your NERVES and NERVE CENTERS must be free from the SLIGHTEST PRESSURE.

To avoid pressure on these highly sensitive nerves the joints of your spinal column must be kept FULLY OPEN—the spinal bones must be kept their normal distance apart and true to each other laterally.

Chiropractic adjustment removes the pressure where there is interference with nerve communication, thus giving to Nature its full power to keep the various organs and tissues in healthy condition and build up the diseased parts so they may perform their natural functions.

Chiropractic brings about co-ordination in the body. Co-ordination means health. Come in and investigate.

I am a graduate of the original Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa.
